

Do vaccines contain cells from aborted fetuses?

Vaccines do not contain cells from aborted fetuses or other human cells.

Human cell lines may be used in the early stages of production of some vaccines; however, all cells are removed during the vaccine manufacturing process.

This means that there are no human cells in the actual vaccines that your child will receive.